“Our dental practice has traded profitably for many years with six figure profits for each of us. Our previous accountants were reliable but not very proactive and we were worried that we were paying too much tax. We asked Sobell Rhodes if there were any ways we could reduce our taxation payments.

They reviewed all of our financial affairs and the advice they have given us has dramatically reduced our tax bills. They recommended we should practice as separate limited companies and our dental practice become a joint venture; how to arrange the ownership of our properties and also get more tax relief on our expenses.”

“The result? Their advice has saved us tax of about £270,000. We are delighted.”
